applications for licences

1 General

- 1.1 Data acquired under Prospecting, Exploration or Mining Licences within the Falkland Islands are released by the Falkland Islands Government to parties that have a genuine and demonstrable interest in prospecting or exploring for minerals in the Falkland Islands, and also to academic organisations for research and teaching purposes, once the data are greater than 5 years old (unless the Falkland Islands Government has agreed an extended confidentiality period).

2 Conditions

- 2.1 Data release is subject to the recipient agreeing that:

1. the data are for his/her or company's own use only and will not be passed to third parties without the express permission of the Falkland Islands Government;
2. the data are not to be lent, sold, reprocessed, incorporated into reports for sale, modified, subjected to added-value revisions or otherwise traded under any circumstances;
3. the data are to be used only for exploration or academic purposes, and not for financial gain;
4. any publications resulting from and illustrating any of the data are to acknowledge both the company from whom the data originated, and the Falkland Islands Government for releasing those data;
5. these conditions of use must be stored with all copies of the data.

- 2.2 The parties from whom the data originated may retain copyright of the data. Any request to acquire further data or to reprocess data should be directed to the parties from whom the data originated. Please note that the supply of information to you does not constitute permission to use it in a way that would infringe any copyright. Permission should be obtained from the copyright holder before any such use is made.

- 2.3 If you accept and agree to these conditions under which data will be supplied and agree to be bound by these conditions, then please sign, date and return a copy of this document to the address below, on receipt of which the Falkland Islands Government will give you instructions for downloading the data.
